For his 30th birthday Christian Gottfried Körner, Friedrich Schiller's friend and benefactor, received a picture story hand-drawn by the scandalous author of The Robbers. Initially intended as a private jest among close friends and later presumed lost, it has since been recovered and is finally presented in print complete with the accompanying manuscript by Ferdinand Huber for the first time.

For ease of reading this edition complete with a transcript of the Huber's manuscript in German and English. The historical context and aesthetics of Schiller's picture story, in which Körner doubles Hercules, faces voracious crocodiles in Egypt, and even gets corned, is explained by Dietrich Grünewald in an extensive introductory essay.
